

The British Association for the Study of Spirituality (BASS)

Data Protection and Privacy Policy

BASS is registered in the UK as an educational charity (No. 1166990) and a company limited by guarantee (No. 7549446).

This policy describes what we do with personal data we collect, and outlines our efforts to protect your privacy.

1. Collection and use of personal data

We only collect details about you with your permission and consent, either on-line, via our website, or through events that we host.

We use this information to keep in contact with you via email. Additionally, we may send out information in the post if this is something you have requested or respond to you by phone if necessary.

If at any time you no longer wish us to hold your details and wish to 'Opt Out' from being contacted by us, please let us know and we will adjust our records or contact lists accordingly.

2. Protection of Your Information

Any personal information you provide to us will be used in compliance with the laws concerning the protection of personal information, including the UK Data Protection Act 1998 and the EU General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR) effective from 25th May 2018.

All data we collect about you is protected against unauthorized access by third parties. We do our utmost to protect your privacy through the appropriate use of security technologies and physical safeguards.

Be aware that BASS's website contains links to other websites of interest operated by third parties. We do not accept any liability for the privacy practices of such third-party websites.

BASS will not, except with your express permission, disclose, share, sell, or trade any personal information that we hold about you.

3. Your Rights

You have the right to unsubscribe from being contacted by BASS at any time. You can do this by using the 'Unsubscribe' link at the bottom of our mailings or by contacting us at bass@southwales.ac.uk. In addition, we will delete your personal information from our records if you ask us to do so.
